

Your first introductions.

Four 30-minute conversations in your first month build the network that makes everything else easier. This guide covers how to set each one up and what to talk about. Your path recommends: your manager and a peer on your team in Week 1, then your skip-level leader and a cross-functional partner in Weeks 2–4.

How to schedule any of these

1. Find the person. Your offer letter and welcome email name your manager. For everyone else, ask your manager in your first conversation: "Who should I meet in my first month?" — then look them up in Outlook or Teams.
2. Send a 30-minute Outlook invite titled "Intro — [your name] + [their name]". Include one line: "I'm new to [your team] and would love 30 minutes to introduce myself and learn how our work connects."
3. Offer two time options in the next five business days. Accept whatever they counter with.
4. Afterward, mark the meeting complete on your Voyage dashboard and add any follow-ups to your notes.

What to cover, by conversation

Your manager (Week 1)

- How do you like to communicate — and how often?
- What should I focus on in my first 30 days?
- What does great look like in this role at 90 days?
- Who else should I meet this month?

A peer on your team (Week 1)

- What do you wish someone had told you in week one?
- Which meetings, tools, and channels actually matter?
- How does work really get done around here?
- Can I shadow you on one task this week?

Your skip-level leader (Weeks 2–4)

- What are the team's top priorities this year?
- How does our work ladder up to Vanderbilt's strategy?
- What separates good from great on this team?

A cross-functional partner (Weeks 2–4)

- Where does your team's work meet mine?
- What does my team do that helps — or hinders — yours?
- What's the best way to work together day to day?

Not sure who your manager or partners are? Ask PCB (People, Culture & Belonging) — they can confirm your reporting line and suggest the right first introductions for your role.

